

LUKE ROBITAILLE
ANALYST

Luke is currently on a sabbatical in Malawi. For more information, see our About Us page.

Luke is a talented communicator and analyst. At Assurgo, he is responsible for deal origination and providing divestiture mandate support, including financial and industry analysis. His approachable demeanor and sense of curiosity make him a valued colleague.

Prior to joining Assurgo, Luke spent two years with the Bank of Canada as an analyst in their business intelligence division. In that role, he met with executives and entrepreneurs to gather views on the Canadian economy, which fed into policy deliberations and quarterly reports. Additionally, Luke was responsible for monitoring and providing forecasts for the transportation and utilities sectors. Previously, he has also worked for the Conference Board of Canada at their Montreal affiliate, l'Institut du Québec. Aside from his interest in economics and finance, Luke has longstanding passion for international development, leading him to intern with a social enterprise in Ghana in 2019.

Luke holds a BA in economics from McGill University.
